Human Dimension and Interior Space Julius Panero,Martin Zelnik,2014-01-21 The study of human body measurements on a comparative basis is known as anthropometrics. Its applicability to the design process is seen in the physical fit, or interface, between the human body and the various components of interior space. Human Dimension and Interior Space is the first major anthropometrically based reference book of design standards for use by all those involved with the physical planning and detailing of interiors, including interior designers, architects, furniture designers, builders, industrial designers, and students of design. The use of anthropometric data, although no substitute for good design or sound professional judgment should be viewed as one of the many tools required in the design process. This comprehensive overview of anthropometrics consists of three parts. The first part deals with the theory and application of anthropometrics and includes a special section dealing with physically disabled and elderly people. It provides the designer with the fundamentals of anthropometrics and a basic understanding of how interior design standards are established. The second part contains easy-to-read, illustrated anthropometric tables, which provide the most current data available on human body size, organized by age and percentile groupings. Also included is data relative to the range of joint motion and body sizes of children. The third part contains hundreds of dimensioned drawings, illustrating in plan and section the proper anthropometrically based relationship between user and space. The types of spaces range from residential and commercial to recreational and institutional, and all dimensions include metric conversions. In the Epilogue, the authors challenge the interior design profession, the building industry, and the furniture manufacturer to seriously explore the problem of adjustability in design. They expose the fallacy of designing to accommodate the so-called average man, who, in fact, does not exist. Using government data, including studies prepared by Dr. Howard Stoudt, Dr. Albert Damon, and Dr. Ross McFarland, formerly of the Harvard School of Public Health, and Jean Roberts of the U.S. Public Health Service, Panero and Zelnik have devised a system of interior design reference standards, easily understood through a series of charts and situation drawings. With Human Dimension and Interior Space, these standards are now accessible to all designers of interior environments.

The Structuring of Organizations Henry Mintzberg, 2009 Synthesizes the empirical literature on organizational structuring to answer the question of how organizations structure themselves --how they resolve needed coordination and division of labor. Organizational structuring is defined as the sum total of the ways in which an organization divides and coordinates its labor into distinct tasks. Further analysis of the research literature is needed in order to build a conceptual framework that will fill in the significant gap left by not connecting a description of structure to its context: how an organization actually functions. The results of the synthesis are five basic configurations (the Simple Structure, the Machine Bureaucracy, the Professional Bureaucracy, the Divisionalized Form, and the Adhocracy) that serve as the fundamental elements of structure in an organization. Five basic parts of the contemporary organization (the operating core, the strategic apex, the middle line, the technostructure, and the support staff), and five theories of how it functions (i.e., as a system characterized by formal authority, regulated flows, informal communication, work constellations, and ad hoc decision processes) are theorized. Organizations function in complex and varying ways, due to differing flows - including flows of authority, work material, information, and decision processes. These flows depend on the age, size, and environment of the organization; additionally, technology plays a key role because of its importance in structuring the operating core. Finally, design parameters are described - based on the above five basic parts and five theories - that are used as a means of coordination and division of labor in designing organizational structures, in order to establish stable patterns of behavior.
