Worst Case Housing Needs 2017 Report to Congress U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, 2017-08-20 The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) is pleased to transmit to the U.S. Congress this 2017 report on Worst Case Housing Needs. This report—the 16th in a longstanding series—provides national data and analysis of the critical problems facing low-income renting families. The report draws on data from the American Housing Survey (AHS), which is funded by HUD and conducted by the U.S. Census Bureau. The AHS has been conducted every 2 years since 1973 and debuted a major redesign in 2015 that included a new national and metropolitan area longitudinal sample. The AHS is a key source of national data on housing markets, conditions, and dynamics. Despite continued signs of a strengthening national economy, the report finds that severe housing problems are on the rise. In 2015, 8.30 million households had worst case needs, up from 7.72 million in 2013 and approaching the record high of 8.48 million in 2011. These households are defined as very low-income renters who do not receive government housing assistance and who paid more than one-half of their income for rent, lived in severely inadequate conditions, or both. High rents in proportion to renter incomes remain dominant among households with worst case needs, leaving these renters with substantial, unmet need for affordable housing. The modest reduction in worst case needs observed in 2013 was not sustained and worst case needs continued their upward trend. Specifically, severe housing problems have grown 41 percent since the beginning of the Great Recession in 2007 and 66 percent since 2001. Worst case needs continue to affect all subgroups, whether defined by race and ethnicity, household structure, or location within metropolitan areas or regions. Contributing most to the increase in worst case needs between 2013 and 2015 was a notable shift from homeownership to renting. The magnitude of this sustained postrecession trend, along with other demographic factors, increased the number of very low-income renters and thereby played a major role in growing worst case needs between 2013 and 2015. Modest gains in household incomes were met with rising rents, shrinking the supply of affordable rental housing stock in an increasingly competitive market. Even with the supply of more expensive units growing, higher-income renters occupy a growing share—43 percent—of the most affordable units. Only 62 affordable units are available per 100 very low-income renters, and only 38 units are available per 100 extremely low-income renters. This report also uses new AHS enhancements to explore the variation in worst case needs and the distribution of housing assistance across a greater variety of market geographies. These data show that, although 43.2 percent of very low-income renters had worst case needs nationally, local markets reflect a substantial degree of variation beyond the longstanding trends observed across regions and types of metropolitan locations
